Symphony Concert Next Monday Will Attract an Audience

THAT WILL FILL THE THEATRE.

Interest in this, the most important musical event of the season, is general. The Advance Sale of Seats Has Been Very Large—The Programme Will Combine the Popular and Classical in Music—The Programme in Full.

The Intelligence gives this morning the full programme for the Pittsburgh Orchestra symphony concert, with Luigi Maria von Kunitz solo violinist, on next Monday evening, in the Opera House. The programme:

PART I.

1. Symphony—"Rustic Wedding".....Goldmark
(1) Wedding March, four variations.
(2) Serenade.
(3) "In the Garden."
(4) Dance.

2. Solo Violin Concerto.....von Kunitz
Luigi Maria von Kunitz solo violinist.

3. Allegretto Grosse (Rustic Wedding Suite).....Mozart

4. Introduction, 3d Act "Lohengrin".....Wagner

PART II.

1. Caprice Italiano.....Tschakowsky
2. Barcarolle—"The Nutcracker".....St. Saens
3. Dances (Henry VIII).....E. German
(1) Morris Dance.
(2) Shepherd's Dance.
4. Overture—"Guillaume Tell".....Rossini

Director Frederic Archer promised a programme which would be pleasing and in the best sense, popular, and the above is a list of compositions which cannot fail to appeal to everyone as most interesting and entertaining. Director Archer is a musician of broad and refined tastes and has made these selections in order to give pleasure to all and at the same time not offend the most critical. The programme will strikingly illustrate the fact that classical music can at once be called the best and most pleasing. Fortunately there are such selections as will give each division of the orchestra some special work, and other numbers in which the full orchestra is brought into play in such a manner as to show the strength and power of the organization.

The subscribers tickets were nearly all exchanged yesterday, but the box office will remain open to-day for those who have not yet secured seats. The subscription sale was better than expected and the general sale will be very large. If interest in the concert may be taken as an indication, General Archer's concert will be a most successful one. The other boys, "singing" amateur theatricals.

AMUSEMENTS.

The popular comedian, Daniel Sully, came upon life's stage a little over thirty-five years ago, and though the debut was made in this country, the good old nurse tells it that he had a leaf of shamrock in his mouth at the time. But this statement has not been authenticated, and the probabilities are it's but a myth from the nursery. But he that as it may, Dan is of undoubted Irish origin. When a lad he had a decided leaning for the stage, and would often spend an hour with the other boys, "singing" amateur theatricals.

At quite an early age an opportunity to adapt the stage as a profession presented itself to young Sully, and he immediately embraced it, and formally made his appearance in the variety field of entertainment. For a number of seasons Dan's good nature and comicality were familiar to the lovers of the vaudeville. It was here that he gained experience and confidence and learned what he could do best. He was among the first to produce the class of uproariously funny comedies, which almost mark a new era in the drama in this country. But Sully's plays were not all farces. He was into them tender and serious scenes, and it was in the acting of such situations that one found the key to his aims. In such passages as these Mr. Sully rose to a very high plane of real emotional and dramatic merit.

His "Daddy Noah" was a piece of fine character, work unquestionable, and raised him very high in the estimation of the critics who saw in his playing of this part glimpses of something better—a rich promise for the laughing comedian if he would only continue in the course he had marked out.

Finally "O'Brien, the Contractor" (The Millionaire), was written expressly for him and it fits perfectly the character of Sully's style of acting. The role of O'Brien is the most serious undertaking of all his stage efforts, but he has made a distinct hit in the creation. The play was written to please all classes of theatregoers, and in this respect the author has been successful. While not in the least bombastic, it is full of action, and interest. A feature of distinct realism is introduced into act second. It is the building of a practical railroad with real rails, ties, dirt and rock and the completion of the road by driving the "golden spike." Mr. Sully's company is the strongest that he has ever taken on the road. He will be at the Opera House Christmas, and New Year and tomorrow night.

"On Broadway."

Margie O'Brien is receiving the most flattering praise for her clever acting in her new play "On Broadway," from both press and public. This entertainment has appeared to be a succession of novel features, merriment and music. A noted critic has said, "Margie O'Brien has no equal. She is simply irresistible; she is a comedienne in the same light that Nat Gooden and Sol Smith Russell are comedians. She inspires the play with the spirit of her own personality until everyone on the stage and in the audience is a Margie O'Brien in different degrees, and the charm of it all is that throughout the performance, while the fun is at its wildest, there is nothing but a bewitching in her acting." On the contrary, she makes manifest a native modesty and delivers that wit and bold sublimity a genuine admiration. She is a thorough artist in every sense of the word and is well entitled to the title of the Irish queen. This attraction comes to the Opera House next Wednesday, December 30, and if the present outlook is an indication, she will play to the capacity of the playhouse.

"Hogan's Alley."

Manager Feinler, of the Grand, has the best holiday attraction he ever had in his theatre, and the large audience which saw its first production last night laughed until it couldn't laugh more. "Hogan's Alley" is the title of the play, which is a comedy taken from the life expressed by O'Brien in his experience in the New York World. The celebrated "Yellow Kid" is strictly in it, and Manager Feinler knows how to impersonate that irrepressible kid in a very funny manner. Gibson and Leonard head the company, and it must be said that they are the funniest Irish comedians seen here in a long time. The Shirley sisters and Gladys Hayden are also capable artists. A matinee will be given this afternoon. Seats on sale at the box office.

WHY not profit by the experience of others who have found a permanent cure for caparia at Hogan's Alley?

IN THE COURTS.

Both Circuit and Criminal Courts were in Session.

Yesterday, in the criminal court, Judge Hughes presiding, a number of criminal cases were decided, as follows:

State vs. John Koyser; indicted for conspiracy in the now famous Fulton "palm fight"; the case was nolle prosequi on account of the demurrers sustained in the cases against the principals and other abettors of the contest.

State vs. Alice Bradford; indictment Nos. 45 and 46, misdemeanor, renting houses for purposes of prostitution, nolle prosequi on indictment Nos. 1 and 33, also was fined $50 and costs in each case.

State vs. Jesse Owens, liverying in a house of ill fame; fined $5 and costs.

State vs. Eberhardt Hoffert; alleged liquor violation; dismissed.

State vs. William Koster; alleged liquor violation; dismissed.

Criminal court adjourned until next Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

In the Circuit Court.

In Part I of the circuit court, Judge Campbell presiding, these cases were decided:

Gregor Hoesche's executor vs. Agatha Auber et al.; there was a confirmation of sale and order of distribution.

S. J. Campbell et al. vs. J. R. Campbell et al.; there was an order of distribution.

In Part II, Judge Pauli on the bench:

S. J. Campbell et al. vs. Joseph Lawson, executor, et al.; confirmation of sale decreed.

In the case of John G. Haherfeld vs. the City of Wheeling, the testimony had not been completed when court adjourned until next Monday morning, when its consideration will be resumed. During the day the jury visited the premises, which the plaintiff claims have been damaged by a change of grade made by the city.

NOVEL SPECTACLE.

Superintendent of Streets Holmes Set Fire to a Pavement.

Superintendent of Streets Holmes, of the board of public works, took extraordinary measures late yesterday afternoon so that it would come under the present year's ten-cent levy appropriation. Baker street, from the bridge over the creek at the Peninsula to its intersection with McCulloch street, has been a bad place in wet and freezing weather for a long time, but all that is of the past now. The bricks had been laid before the freezing weather but the sand had not been thrown over the pavement and been worked into the cracks between the bricks. The freeze would ordinarily have prevented the work being completed, but Superintendent Holmes took unusual measures and the pavement is now completed and ready for traffic. He first covered the pavement with sand, then laid on a layer of sawdust and finally topped it off with a barrel of gasoline. Then he touched a match and the very novel spectacle of a piece of brick paving 350 long and sixty or seventy feet wide on fire was seen. The blaze spread over the pavement like a flash and burned for several minutes. Then the pavement was no longer frozen and the sand was free to work into the interstices.
